A mother's last prayer.

He went over and laid his hand on her shoulder. To his shock, he found she was dead. He was terribly shaken. Was it not her grief over him that had killed her? Was he not responsible, unworthy son that he was? But it was too late.

Right there and then, God spoke to him. He had seen his mother's life, heard her advice that came from her living faith and he was going to answer for it. That night, Peter turned to God. He acknowledged his sins and accepted Jesus as his Lord and Saviour. In the many years to come, he faithfully and zealously proclaimed the great salvation God offers to all those who believe in Him. He had come to know Jesus for himself through such tragic conditions.

One evening, despite his mother's pleas, Peter went out to join his friends. "A bit of fun doesn't do any harm," he thought to himself, "My parents are just old fashioned. I'm only young once!"

As he walked out the door, his mother called after him, "Peter, you know I'll be praying for you until you come back!"

That night, the fun seemed bland. The atmosphere was dull. Eventually, he decided to go home.

The light was still on in his mother's room. Surprised, he went in.

He found his mother kneeling by her bedside, her head resting on the blankets.
